Parent Tip:

Be involved in your child's care as much as possible and ask a lot of questions.

Advocate: NIDCAP Needs You!

With her research to help reduce neonatal stressors in the NICU and the creation of the NIDCAP Federation International training program, Dr. Heidi Als has made a difference for preemie families worldwide. Yet AAP's journal Pediatrics printed an article that is misleading and serves to discredit NIDCAP. Please sign & pass on this petition: <http://bit.ly/NIDCAP>

Preemie Resource: Risk Factors & Need for Help

PreemieWorld provides a number of free handouts to be used in the NICU and beyond in its "Freebies For You" section of the website. This month's freebie is "Risk Factors & Need for Help." "In reviewing the Love & Logic (www.LoveandLogic.com) series, I realized how preemie parents are at a real disadvantage," comments Deb Discenza, co-Founder of PreemieWorld, LLC. "With the focus on the child's needs, setting limits takes a back seat. This tool gives you clues of when to seek help." Parents and professionals alike will appreciate this freebie in that it is easy to print and reproduce. So go download it here now: <http://bit.ly/RiskFactor> And check out many more here: <http://bit.ly/PreemieFreebies>

Term: Colostrum

Support: Dallas Preemie Parents

Colostrum: The yellow-ish breast milk that comes out after you start pumping breast milk or breastfeeding. It is also known as "Liquid Gold" by the nurses because it provides much-needed fats and nutrients for your baby.

the pump since no one had come around to talk about pumping or breastfeeding in general.

Deb's Take: In my recovery room, I stared at the breast pump the morning after delivering Becky. Looking at my husband, I said we should consider my starting to use

I was disappointed with the tiny amount of yellow stuff that had come out after the 20 minutes of pumping. I told Gregg to take it to the nurse and see if we just needed to throw it out or not. Gregg came back and excitedly told me the nurse was thrilled and was currently rushing it down to the NICU – that it was "Liquid Gold."

The Gold Rush had nothing on how I felt at that moment. I felt like I had won the lottery and could do something to help my daughter.

Preemie Genius: Parenting Children w/Spec Med Needs

The Details:

Name:

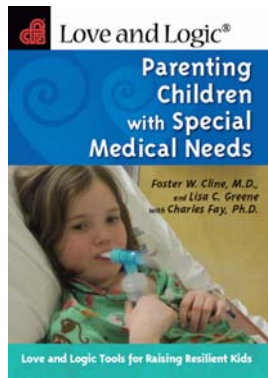

Parenting Children with Special Medical Needs

By:

Love and Logic Institute, Inc.

The Website:

www.loveandlogic.com

The Genius:

Parenting a child without needs is challenging. But when you add in special needs (medical, developmental, behavioral and more) parents are often at a loss how to bring up their child to be confident and self-sufficient in terms of life but especially in terms of the daily treatments and therapies that are needed in childhood and even into adulthood. Love and Logic's special series on special medical needs provides solid tips to get there. And it works.

COOL:

We are giving away two books and a DVD in the "Parenting Children with Special Medical Needs." The winners will be selected from the new subscribers to Preemie Family 4/1/13 - 4/26/13. <http://bit.ly/preemie1>

After the NICU: Asking for Help

In the early days and months of a NICU stay and even at discharge time, families are scrambling to tackle urgent matters at the hospital alongside maintaining demands of home, work and more.

If someone offers help – ask him/her to set up and coordinate a "team list" for the family needs for meals, childcare, etc. These sites take the work out of coordinating:

Q & A: The Hand to Hold "For the Love of Babies" Program

Hand to Hold, a national NICU parent support program has launched its "For the Love of Babies" campaign happening now until 30 April 2013. Public Awareness Director, Amy Carr gives us the background on this event:

Q: How did this special fundraiser come about?
 "For the Love of Babies" is a 100-day fundraising and awareness campaign designed to help not only raise awareness of the challenges associated with a baby's hospital stay and infant loss, but also to fund Hand to Hold's efforts to expand parent support, education and resources to NICU families across the country.

Q: No walking, just email and social media right? That will make RSV lockdown families happy. Any prizes?

A: Exactly. And yes, as part of the "For the Love of Babies" campaign, families who raise $1,000 or more by April 30, 2013 may gift a one-year subscription to Hand to Hold's new NICU Resource Library to the hospital of their choice. Those who raise a total of $500 or more during the campaign are entered into a random drawing for an Apple iPad Mini (16GB) valued at $329. The drawing will be held May 2013.

Q: Where do families go to sign up?
