AFTER THE NICU:

Emotional Preemie Triggers

Maybe it is the sounds of an urgent alarm that sets you off? Or maybe it is a truck backing up with the beep beep beep noise? Or even the alarm of the french fry cooker going off that sets your teeth on edge? The smell of hand sanitizer? The smell of hospital soap?

Whatever it is, you are not alone. Parents worldwide have flashbacks to the NICU at numerous points during their lifetime, even years and decades out. These emotions are, oddly enough, normal. But what is not normal is to bottle up those emotions and push them aside while you focus on your preemie's needs. You need self-care too. If you are finding that daily life seems “stuck” please reach out to a therapist immediately. You will be glad you did.
