A NOTE FROM JENNY

PreemieWorld, LLC was created by preemie mom, Deb Discenza, who saw a need for better communication and support in the NICU.

PreemieWorld has been instrumental in building a strong community encouraging partnerships between NICU organizations, preemie families and NICU professionals. With many resources including the book, "The Preemie Parent's Survival Guide to the NICU," (premieworld.com/store/) and a support group designed for preemie parents at all stages of the NICU journey, (preemie.inspire.com), our goal is to provide parents and professionals with the tools to survive the NICU.

During NICU Awareness Month, AWARENESS is the key to strengthening our preemie community. It is a time to enlighten the masses by sharing our stories and it is also a time to show our appreciation to the many preemie professionals who tirelessly support us.

AFTER THE NICU

The NICU days are behind you and you are ready to get back to work. It can be a daunting task to find childcare for your preemie who may be susceptible to illness. With daycare comes the exposure to germs. What options are available to you to help calm your heart and ease yourself into your work routine?

Pediatrician: Talk to your pediatrician about daycare options. Your pediatrician will have helpful advice for you and be able to discern whether your preemie should be in a home setting with minimal children/caregivers or if he/she is ready for a daycare facility. Your pediatrician may also provide special immunizations as a precaution.

PREEMIE STORY OF THE MONTH

JOSHUA MCCORMICK

"Today is supposed to be Joshua's due date. How appropriate that today is also the start of NICU Awareness Month, shares preemie mom," Jenny McCormick

"Instead of arriving on September 1st, Joshua made his appearance on May 31st, and launched his mom & dad onto a path we had never expected and one we definitely weren't prepared for."

"Never underestimate the strength, subornness and determination of a baby born too soon."

- Jenny McCormick
